TYO Launches Literacy Program with MEPI

The project will engage thirty university students, ten mothers and several TYO staff members in a workshop series that will promote values of volunteerism and civic engagement. Through these workshops, youth and women will receive the necessary training to teach children (ages 6-8) how to read. Click here to read more.

Triple Exposure Update: Investing in Youth

(above) Mahmoud, a triple exposure participant, was interviewed by a Turkish TV channel At the "Suvarna" Children's Photography Exhibition in Ramallah last year: "I feel very proud to have won the contest, and I dream of becoming a photographer or a journalist like the ones who come to visit our class."

Recently returned TYO intern, Julie, celebrates her homecoming in Maryland–Nabulsi style.

She shared her TYO experience and the food of Nablus with friends and family at dinner party at her home in Maryland. Guests were delighted by the food, including familiar dishes like hummus and tabbouleh and those less common, such as maqloubeh, mujaddareh, and delicious fruit cocktails. In late September 2010, the MEPI Local Grants Program at the United States Consulate General in Jerusalem awarded TYO a grant for its "Enriching our Community: Learning to Serve, Serving to Read" program. This program will use Scholastic's My Arabic Library to teach nearly 400 children in Nablus how to read.

Mahmoud is 14 and joined TYO's Triple Exposure photography class in the Fall of 2009. He took to photography immediately – after only four months of class, his beautiful photo of a man walking in the rain was selected for first prize in the Waleed Photography Magazine Young Photographers' Competition! Though we took on a new batch of photo students in the Summer of 2010, Mahmoud asked if he could keep coming to class as a volunteer; since then he has helped teach photography and film to kids as old as and sometimes older than himself.
